THERE is a place close to home where children can learn the best creative skills – and for a low cost.

ROAR Performing Arts Academy principal Madeleine Johns said ROAR had been set up to train and develop talented youth at an affordable cost, without the need to travel into Brisbane for a high-calibre level of creative training.

"ROAR is the only performing arts academy based here in Redcliffe offering training in all the triple threat skills – acting, singing and dancing – for youth aged five to 17 years," Ms Johns said.

She said the academy provided regular performing opportunities for all students, such as a January workshop in pantomime, end of term concerts, a major musical in the Sep-
